Blackberry Wine (1999) & Five Quarters of the Orange (2001) by Joanne Harris
Finished Reading: August 2015
Rating: 2/5 & 3/5
I read Harris' Five Quarters of the Orange & Blackberry Wine back to back, so I shall be reviewing them together. They are very similar, actually; a little too much. Both feature lead female protagonists that have strong, proud, independent, walled-away personalities ...

Having said that, Blackberry Wine ended up being a kind of companion piece to Chocolat after all. It wasn't intended that way, but there are recurring themes (food/wine as an agent of transformation, magic, life in a small community) which link the two books.

Blackberry Wine | Joanne Harris

Blackberry wine is a magical realism novel by Joanne Harris, published in 2000. This story continues with her typical split-narrative technique and follows two separate timelines. One is situated in Yorkshire twenty years earlier than the other, which is set in the fictional village of Lansquenet-sous-Tannes, the setting of her previous book, Chocolat.

Blackberry Wine Quotes by Joanne Harris - Goodreads

Joanne Harris' Coastliners is a departure from her Lansquenet stories (Chocolat, Blackberry Wine). She leaves the sleepy French mainland village and all of its upbeat charm and magical realism for a sleepy French island village full of superstition, suspicion, envy, competition, lethargy and - finally - hope.

Blackberry Wine: A Novel by Joanne Harris | Excerpt ...

Joanne Harris weaves spells of "everyday magic" once again in Blackberry Wine. Her previous novel, Chocolat, was a delicious confection, melding together bewitchment and romance in a chocolatier, in the sleepy French village of Lansquenet. This time around six bottles of home-made brew are the catalyst for her "layman's alchemy."
